THE LIFE AND HARD TIMES OF Little Orphan Annie

Introduction

I met Harold Gray for the first—and only—time over 30 years ago. He was, even then, a legend. I was but a rumor that had just gotten started.

He said: "I know your stuff, Capp. You're going to be around a long time. Take my advice and buy a house in the country. Build a wall around it. And get ready to protect yourself. The way things are going, people who earn their living someday are going to have to fight off the bums."

I remember that I was shocked, and a bit amused at his words. But not surprised. Gray was known to us liberal young snots (and to those who had passed snothood but felt young, and were lauded as liberals, because they went on thinking as snottily as we did) as a bitter old man. He was, then, in his fifties. I was, then, nearing thirty. I am ten years older today than Gray was then. I knew we had nothing to fear from the "bums." I had been on the bum myself. In the thirties, there weren't many chances for anyone to earn a living, and almost none for a kid with one leg. When a chance did come along, I grabbed it, and held on for dear life. I knew that bums were eager not to be bums, and that, far from imperilling those who wanted to earn a living, they were eager to join them.

But bums have changed. And my attitude toward Harold Gray has changed.

I bought a house in the country, as he advised me to. I didn't build a wall around it.

In the last five years, it has been broken into, several times. I live on a pleasant, historic street in Cambridge, Massachusetts. There have been two attempts to rob it in the last few years, one attempt at rape in our garage. One car was stolen from our garage. Most of the homes on my street have been broken into during the last few years. One, four times.

There have been in the last few years, murders, muggings, and molestings in our neighborhood. It is no longer safe to walk on my street after dark.

There are four people employed in my studio, in mid-town Boston. This year, two have been mugged.

I have made no "preparation" to defend myself, as Gray advised. I rely on the authorities for that, like everyone else. And, like everyone else, I don't go out much.

It has taken me thirty years to realize what a superior understanding of our even-then developing ruling class, the bums, Gray had. They aren't the unemployed or the rejected, as we liberal young snots thought.

Read your front page this morning. It will be full of the crimes they committed last night. Crimes which required health, strength, and energy. Then turn to the back pages and read about the jobs they scorn, under "Help Wanted. No Experience Necessary."

If it's an average day, you will find that for every one who sticks up a cabdriver, snatches a purse, or robs a candystore, there are two jobs waiting.

Every day, today, hundreds of thousands of us are taking Harold Gray's advice. We are fleeing from our cities, buying homes in the country, and preparing to protect ourselves.

Harold Gray was a sharper observer of American trends, a truer prophet of America's future than Walter Lippmann.

He created characters that have endured longer than Upton Sinclair's. He drew better pictures, in his seventies, than Picasso did.

If he was that good, you may ask, why wasn't HE a political pundit, a revered novelist, or a master of modern art, as they were—instead of a cartoonist?

The answer is he WAS all that, as a cartoonist.

And more.

Because more of the world was affected by his political prophecy, transfixed by his story-telling, and compelled by his art than all the Lippmanns, Sinclairs, and Picassos who were his contemporaries.

If Gray's attitudes were old-fashioned in his time, so too, then, are personal dignity, manners, and respect for law today. And now ask yourself this: Can any new society be built without those attitudes?

HAROLD GRAY

—A biographical sketch

In millions of American homes "Little Orphan Annie" is as indispensable to the breakfast table as coffee and cereal. For over 40 years kids and grown-ups have been cheering "Atta Girl, Annie!" as the frizzy-haired moppet escapes from one cliff-hanging predicament after another.

Annie, who's about 11 or 12 years old, hasn't aged a day since she stepped off the drawing boards into print. She made her debut in the special pink edition of the New York Daily News on August 5, 1924, along with five other new strips, all of which were failures.

Her creator, the late Harold Gray, often said Annie narrowly missed being an Andy. Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, the late founder of the New York Daily News, suggested that Gray "put skirts on the kid and call her Little Orphan Annie."

This seemed like sound advice to Gray, since 40 other comic strips at that time were all using boys as the main characters. Gray liked the idea of having Annie as an orphan since "she'd have no extraneous relatives, no tangling alliances, and the freedom to go where she pleased."

In many ways Annie epitomized Mr. Gray's personal convictions that all Americans should act with honor, independence of thought, and industry, mind their own business and remain true to the traditional pioneering virtues.

Describing his brainchild, Gray said: "Annie is tougher than hell with a heart of gold and a fast left, who can take care of herself because she has to. She's controversial, there's no question about that. But I keep her on the side of motherhood, honesty, and decency."

"Little Orphan Annie" so captivated the public that she rapidly went from one newspaper to several hundred others.

Nobody guessed how strong the attachment of the public had become for Annie until the Chicago Tribune omitted her from the October 27, 1925, editions. Annie's outraged fans besieged the Tribune with a flood of phone calls, letters, and telegrams demanding to know what had become of her. The next day the paper ran a front-page apology saying that not since the news of the fake World War I armistice had the switchboard been so swamped. The deprived readers were appeased with two Annie strips.

In accounting for Annie's popularity, Harold Gray said, ". . . the comic strip reading public in time becomes weary of nothing but funny jokes and gags. They want comic strips with suspense, romance, danger, and thrills in them. That's what I try to give them in Orphan Annie."

Annie had the stuff of which popular radio serials are made. During the Thirties, the listening as well as the reading public followed her adventures starring Shirley Bell—a child star of the era.

Harold Gray's life has much of the small-town-boy-makes-good theme about it. As a farm boy in Kankakee, Illinois, he sold front-page cartoons to the old Lafayette (Indiana) Journal, now the Journal & Courier, and peddled his wares to farm journals. He paid his way through Purdue University with construction jobs.

Fame and fortune didn't come overnight to Gray. His first job on the Chicago Tribune was a cub reporter slot at $15 a week. Shortly after he was promoted to general handyman in the art department. He served his army hitch, free-lanced, and then signed on as assistant to Sid Smith, creator of the Gumps, where he stayed for five years. Gray claimed it was "the finest training any apprentice cartoonist could dream of." With "Annie" Gray found a gold mine which brought him fame and great wealth.

After "Annie" was established, Mr. Gray moved East where he lived a quiet life in Connecticut. Winters he spent in La Jolla, California, where he moved several months before he died in May of 1968. Mr. Gray was twice married. His first wife, the former Doris C. Platt, died in 1925. Four years later he married Miss Winifred Frost, who survives him.

Annie kept Harold Gray far too busy to lead much of a social life, join civic organizations or make speeches.

His wife Winifred functioned as chief researcher and kept extensive files on scores of subjects. In recent years Gray's cousin Robert Leffingwell had done the lettering and background for "Annie," in addition to his own comic strip, "Little Joe."

It was Mr. Gray's firm belief that a cartoonist should never get in a rut. He traveled 40,000 miles a year around the country to keep his ear to the ground. He went abroad only once.

In an interview several years ago, Mr. Gray pondered Annie's future.

> "Annie will continue to sell the idea that life is a battle, with victory for the brave and stronghearted alone. Probably she'll never grasp complete victory, but she'll get a few tail feathers now and then. And I hope a long-suffering public will continue to encourage her—for at least another 50 years."

Since the death of Harold Gray, "Little Orphan Annie" has been carried on by veteran cartoonist Philip Blaisdell. There's every indication that indefatigable Annie will continue to be as popular with all age groups and you can indeed count on her being around for that 50 years!

Harold Gray was a cartoonist for 44 years. For 34 of them he was associated with the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate. Though he died in 1968, Little Orphan Annie continues, durable and —dare we hope? — all but immortal. Just as Harold Gray would have wanted it.

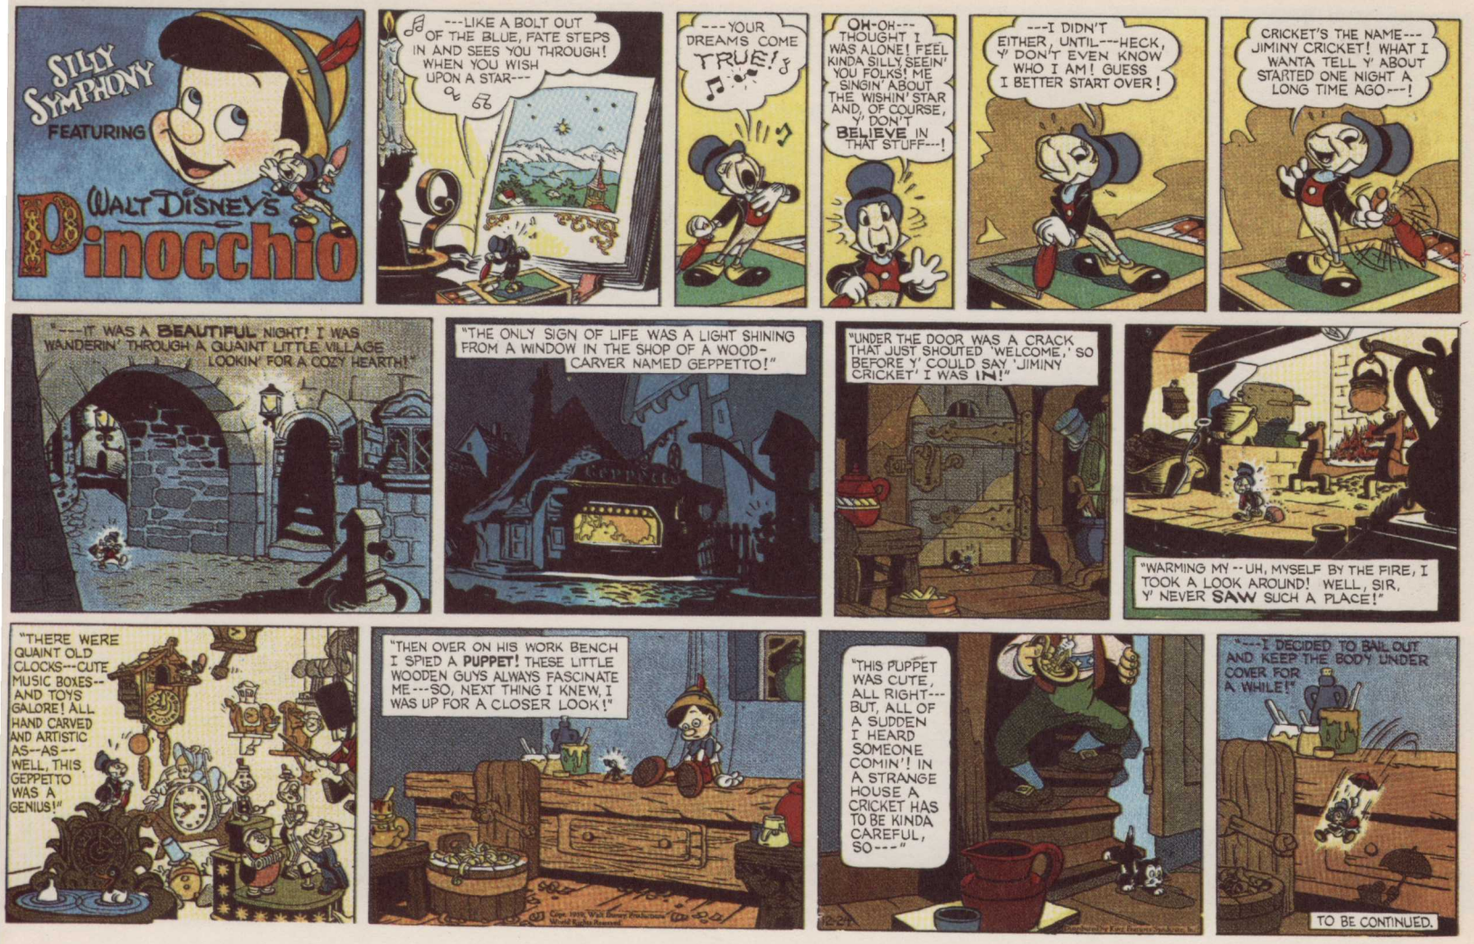

After being discharged from the Army as a lieutenant in 1917, Gray joined the Chicago Tribune as a staff artist. In 1920 he went out on his own. Annie first saw the light of newsprint in 1923, while Gray was working as an assistant to Sidney Smith, creator of "The Gumps."

Harold Gray was born in Kankakee, Illinois, and graduated from Purdue University. He made his home with his wife in Connecticut and wintered in La Jolla, California, until his death.

IT'S YOUR FATHER! HE SAYS---!
MY FATHER! OH, READ IT--- QUICK, JIMINY!
Dear Pinocchio :- When I heard you had gone to Pleasure Island, I took a boat and tried to save you. But, to my dismay, we met up with that terror of the deep, Monstro, the whale! In a flash he swallowed us; first and I'll! I am still living, but there's no hope of escape! seems no hope of escape! Your loving father, Geppetto
3-17
NEITHER PINOCCHIO NOR JIMINY KNOW THAT THE MESSAGE HAS BEEN GUIDED TO THEM BY THE BLUE FAIRY!
OH, MY POOR FATHER! AND IT'S ALL ON ACCOUNT OF ME!
---BUT, HE'S STILL ALIVE! I'M GOING TO THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA AND RESCUE HIM! I'LL FIND SOME WAY!
HUH? YOU? WHY--THIS MONSTRO IS FEROCIOUS--YOU'LL BE KILLED!
I DON'T CARE! IT'S MY FAULT HE'S DOWN THERE, AND I DON'T WANTA LIVE WITHOUT HIM! GOOD-BYE, JIMINY---!

WALT DISNEY'S
Pinocchio
LEARNING THAT GEPPETTO IS STILL ALIVE AFTER BEING SWALLOWED BY A HUGE WHALE, PINOCCHIO VALIANTLY SETS OUT TO TRY AND RESCUE HIM!
DO Y' REALIZE WHAT YOU'RE UP AGAINST, SON? THAT WHALE'S A TERROR--- SWALLOWS WHOLE SHIPS, THEY SAY!
I KNOW, JIMINY, BUT I'VE JUST GOT TO SAVE MY FATHER! IF ONLY WE KNEW WHERE TO FIND MONSTRO!
I'VE ASKED AND ASKED! CAN YOU TELL ME WHERE TO FIND MONSTRO, THE WHALE?
LOOK--HE MUST BE AWFUL! EVERYONE DOWN HERE'S SCARED SILLY WHEN Y' EVEN MENTION HIS NAME!
I DON'T CARE! IT'S MY FAULT THAT FATHER'S IN TROUBLE, AND I WON'T GO BACK WITHOUT HIM!
MEANWHILE, NOT FAR AWAY, THE GREAT TERROR OF THE DEEP LAY SLUMBERING!
ALAS---IS THERE NO HOPE? IF MONSTRO WOULD ONLY WAKE AND OPEN HIS MOUTH---!
I'VE DONE EVERYTHING I COULD--- EVEN BUILT A RAFT WITH THE WOOD FROM THE BOATS HE'S SWALLOWED!
WHAT'S THIS? HE'S WAKING UP--- HE'S OPENING HIS MOUTH!
OH, I MIGHT HAVE KNOWN--- WHEN HE OPENS HIS MOUTH--- MORE THINGS COME IN--- NOTHING GOES OUT!
HE'S JUST HUNGRY AGAIN AND SWALLOWS EVERY--- OUCH--- WHAT'S THAT---?

Walt Disney's Pinocchio

LIVING ON A BOAT, INSIDE A HUGE WHALE, THERE SEEMS SMALL HOPE FOR THE LITTLE PUPPET AND HIS FATHER! BUT PINOCCHIO, WITH NEW-FOUND COURAGE, DETERMINES ON A BOLD PLAN OF ESCAPE!

DON'T GIVE UP, FATHER--- LET'S TRY! HURRY, NOW--- BE READY WITH THE RAFT!

SUCH A--KA-HUK--KA-HAWF--SUCH A LOT OF SMOKE---!

THAT'S WHAT WE WANT--- PLENTY OF SMOKE--KER-CHOO--TO MAKE HIM SNEEZE!

SURE ENOUGH, SMARTING AND TICKLING FROM THE SMOKE IN HIS THROAT, THE WHALE BEGINS TO COUGH! THEN THE GREAT NOSE WRINKLES---THE CAVERNOUS MOUTH OPENS---!

AH- AHH--

---AND MONSTRO SNEEZES!

HURRAY, FATHER--- WE MADE IT!

TO BE CONCLUDED.

Walt Disney's Pinocchio

THEIR RAFT SMASHED BY THE ANGRY WHALE AND GEPPETTO EXHAUSTED, PINOCCHIO BRAVELY TRIES TO REACH SHORE, CARRYING HIS UNCONSCIOUS FATHER!

ONE LAST, FURIOUS LUNGE BY MONSTRO JUST MISSES AND THE HUGE WAVE HE CREATES HURLS HIS QUARRY ONTO THE SHORE!

AS THE WAVES SUBSIDE, OLD GEPPETTO SITS UP, STILL DAZED!

---IT'S A MIRACLE, PINOCCHIO---WE ARE SAVED!

PINOCCHIO! MY POOR, POOR BOY! ALAS ---TO SAVE ME HE HAS GIVEN HIS OWN LIFE!

SADLY, THE HEARTBROKEN OLD MAN TAKES THE LITTLE PUPPET HOME AND KNEELS IN SILENT PRAYER.

POOR OLD GEPPETTO! STILL, HE CAN BE PROUD OF THE WAY THE BOY CAME THROUGH! YES, SIR---BRAVE AS THEY MAKE 'EM!

BRAVE, TRUTHFUL AND UNSELFISH! YOU HAVE PROVEN YOURSELF, PINOCCHIO! AWAKE!
